How do you design a living room?

When designing a living room, there's one particular element that tends to... let the vibe of the room down. You can pick the most stylish sofa, the trendiest of rugs, the perfect color palette, and then it comes to adding the TV. Where do you put this black hole and not immediately turn it into the focus of the space?

Do you need a sofa in a living room?

There are no set design rules when it comes to the living room. You don't need to have a sofa in your living room. A living room without a sofa can be a modern interior design for a small or a larger space. It's a style statement and it's nice to do something different. Your sofa doesn't have to be the focal point of your family room.

To compensate for the lack of a sofa visually, you can successfully use a statement chair. In this living room design, a round statement chair is used, and it makes up for it in a small room. Of course, you will need to take care of the extra seating without a sofa. Wingback Chairs in an Accent Color
